Health concerns take precedence

Snap, Crackle and Pop are part of a conspiracy theory. Many people would like to believe that they are part of a conspiracy targeting consumers. It’s easy to look back and see the why. We’re living in confined quarters, whether it’s four people in a bedroom or one person in a hospital ward. We’re looking to fix something and looking for the quick fix that is going to be there. Whatever the reason, we’re all scared of dying. Maybe we’re scared of H1N1. Maybe we’re scared of being left behind by the economic trouble. People are looking for the quick fix that makes sense. People are looking to fix easily and quickly.

The real problem is that while people worry about losing jobs, while people worry about the deaths of friends and family, they don’t worry about the losses of health. They don’t worry about the losses of health.

While we’re living in confined quarters, whether we’re looking to fix something in our lives or not, we’re looking to fix easily and quickly.
