You have the press pass to my heart

Lacey Ellis
Killed for tradition

Motherhood should not be defined by gender

Great stuff, features writer, Grace, TSU Music Faculty, Lucy Murphy. In my opinion, the New York Times is a great example of the kind of journalism we need. It is well-written and well-researched. Lucy Murphy is a great addition to the team. I hope she continues to write for us.

Letter to the Editor

March 31, 2017

The Index, Kirksville Daily Tribune,

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my concern about the recent editorial in The Index. The editorial, written by Grace, claims that women are better at working with people and that they are more nurturing. I strongly disagree with this perspective.

First of all, it is important to recognize that women and men are both capable of nurturing and working with people. However, it is a mistake to assume that women are inherently better at these tasks. Women and men have different strengths and weaknesses, and these differences should be acknowledged.

For example, studies have shown that men are better at completing tasks that require physical strength, while women are better at tasks that require emotional intelligence. Additionally, research has shown that men are more likely to be risk-takers, while women are more likely to be risk-averse.

Therefore, it is important to recognize that both women and men are capable of working with people and nurturing others. This perspective is important because it challenges the idea that women are naturally better at these tasks.

I urge The Index to consider a more balanced perspective in its future editorial content.

Sincerely,

Linda Smith

Editorial Policy

The Index reserves the right to edit submitted material because of the editor-in-chief's determination that it is in the best interest of the paper. The Index reserves the right to edit submitted material for clarity, style, and content. The Index reserves the right to refuse to publish any material that is deemed inappropriate by the editor-in-chief. The Index reserves the right to charge for the publication of any material that is deemed inappropriate by the editor-in-chief.

Advertisements Policy

The Index reserves the right to refuse to publish any advertisement that is deemed inappropriate by the editor-in-chief. The Index reserves the right to charge for the publication of any advertisement that is deemed inappropriate by the editor-in-chief.

Letters Policy

The Index reserves the right to edit submitted letters to the editor because of the editor-in-chief's determination that it is in the best interest of the paper. The Index reserves the right to charge for the publication of any letter that is deemed inappropriate by the editor-in-chief.

Web Poll

Do you agree with the U.S. Post Office’s decision to eliminate Saturday mail delivery to cut costs?

No: 30%
Yes: 70%

Out of 30 votes.

Cartoon by Megan Archer

Well, it was lots of hard work. Adoption agencies needed to be sure we were fit parents.

I guess we're just naturally fit. Joe, put down the hammer. Aw, come on! It'll toughen them up!

Fine, whatever.

Lacey Murphy is a junior French major from Springfield, Mo.